JAPANESE STILL QUITE ACTIVE

They Are Said to be Making Progress.

Their Line Now Extends Forty Miles or More, It Is Claimed.

THE LATEST WAR NEWS

Tokio, July 5.—A force of Russians attacked the Japanese outposts at Motien Ling Pass Sunday but were repulsed, losing 80 killed and wounded. The Japanese casualties were 45.

POSITION OF JAPANESE ARMY.

London, July 5.—The Tokio correspondent of Central News reports that the central column of Japanese first army occupies a line nearly forty miles long, between Motien Ling Pass and Hsinking Pass. A portion of the northwestern column of the Japanese army occupied Siao Pein Ling, six miles northwest of Fen Shui Ling. The main army of the Japanese has advanced westward.

TYPHUS FEVER APPEARS.

Rome, July 5.—The Liao Yang correspondent of the Agenzia Libera reports that six hundred cases of typhus fever have broken out in the Russian army.

TROOPS MOBILIZED.

St. Petersburg, July 5.—An imperial ukase was issued mobilizing all the troops in the St. Petersburg province.

JAPS CHANGE PLANS.

St. Petersburg, July 5.—The news of moment is that the Japanese, after seemingly abandoning the idea of rushing toward Liao Yang by the northern road, had once started, considerably reinforcing their right flank, with the evident intention of preventing Kuropatkin sending too great an army toward Hai Cheng, which place, it is imagined here, the Japanese will make frantic efforts to take before the rainy season sets in for good and all.

Korok's advance guard, forming a considerable force, has gone beyond Mo Tien Pass past Lan Tse Shan, about 15 miles from Liao Yang, but here it is supposed they do not dare capture the latter place.

An imperial order, just issued, causes rather considerable agitation here. It is for a further calling out of the reserves of St. Petersburg.

JUNE WEATHER

Official Summary Shows Little Difference.

The Weather This Year Is About the Same as Last.

A great many people seem to think that the weather this year is remarkable. "Did you ever see such weather?" is frequently heard on the streets.

It appears from the official record, however, that the weather for June of this year was about the same as for June last year. Instead of its being cooler than last June a year ago, however, the mean temperature for June 1903, was lower than for the June just closed.

The official figures are thus given by Government Observer William Bornemann:

Monthly Summary For June 1904 and 1903.

The contract called for the completion and delivery of the apparatus within 90 days and the time has expired. Chief Woods is expecting the new machines this week but does not know whether or not the manufacturers will notify before shipment.

The Jones and Tenth street station is not yet complete but will be the latter part of the week when the painters get through and when the new apparatus comes all that will have to be done is to install it.

The Loss Is About $5000 With No Insurance.

Mr. Charles Smith, of Birmingham, Marshall county, lost his store and stock Sunday night by fire.

The store was struck by lightning in the thunder storm and before the blaze could be extinguished the building and contents were completely enveloped in flames. The stock and building was worth in the neighborhood of $6 and no insurance was carried. The loss will be about $5, a portion of the stock being saved after it was seen that it was impossible to put the fire out.

PEACHES WANTED

THE CANNING FACTORY IS NOW MAKING CONTRACTS FOR PEACHES.

The Paducah canning factory will be in the market this season for a large quantity of peaches and will probably be able to purchase a large part of the peach crop of this section. The company has already begun to make contracts with the farmers for their peaches and all farmers who desire to sell their crops should make arrangements with the canning company as soon as possible.

The factory will handle both free-stone and cling peaches and will begin to receive them as soon as enough are brought in to keep the factory busy.

Call on Mr. N. G. Yoder, superintendent of the factory at Tenth and Norton streets, or address

ANNOUNCEMENTS.

For Congress.

Hon. J. C. Speight, of Graves
County.

DAILY THOUGHT.

In all life growth is attained
through exertion, effort, struggle.
Antagonism, at which many chafe,
really provides golden opportunities
for development.—Selected.

THE WEATHER.

Occasional showers tonight and Wednesday.

The people of South Second street
need not be alarmed over the mayor's suggestion to move the market house
and convert the site into a public park. The idea is too ridiculous to merit serious consideration. Even if the property wouldn't revert to the original owners if abandoned as a market house, which it would do under the deeds of conveyance, the idea of having a park there would be absurd. Before city officials go to agitating the park question they had better turn their attention to the mayor's namesake, "Yeiser Park," which is really the best place in the city for a park, being amply large, and centrally located. A small amount of money would put it in good shape,
and the fact that the city has let the park go to rack and ruin, and even attempted to repudiate the contract with the county to maintain Yeiser
park for a long term of years, shows that the administration is not losing any sleep over the park question.

It is now up to the council what to do with the milk and meat inspectors ordinance. Paducah has a population of 25,000 or more, and if the position is abolished it will leave these 25,000 people at the mercy of those sellers of meat and milk who are unscrupulous in their methods. It is likely there are few of these latter, but it is against the evil-disposed that all protective regulations are directed.
It is hardly possible that the public,
for the sake of saving a few dollars a month, will approve of the abolition of an office that is or can be made, of so much benefit to the people. Scarcely a city in the country the size of Paducah is without a milk
and meat inspector, and to dispense with the one here will be a step backward.

Business may be dull in some circles
at present, but there will be a grand revival that will make up for the lull
the latter part of the year, after Roosevelt and Fairbanks have been elected and the commercial interests of the country are thus assured that the vast resources of the nation are still in safe hands. Millions of dollars are now ready to be invested and put into circulation as soon as the national administration for the next four years is definitely and satisfactorily settled, and this can only be

by electing a Republican ticket.

The Populists are in session up at Springfield, Ill., and will turn out a platform which the Democrats can steal as they did in 1896 and 1900 if they want to. The probabilities are that they will get up an original one
this time, however, and leave Mr.
Bryan and Mr. Hearst and their supporters to go to the Pops, or the Pops
to come to them through sympathy—
it is not certain which.

The death of Colonel R. Lee Suter, at Louisville, from a stray bullet from a bare-brained youth's pistol, removes a picturesque figure from state Democratic politics. Colonel Suter had many friends throughout Kentucky, and was one of those genial, generous men who was as courteous to his political opponents
as to his friends.

Santos Dumont didn't make his balloon ascension at the world's fair
yesterday, but Colonel W. J. Bryan was on hand to speak, and it is understood went up in the air himself a few times. It really doesn't make much difference, anyhow. One freak does as well as another for a holiday crowd.

The Turks keep up their bloody massacres. Some day an impatient world will swoop down on the Musselman, divide up his country among more worthy people, and the few who escape will be forced to exhibit themselves in the dime museums as relics of a dead race.

The death list is already being made up from the Fourth of July returns. The reckless carouser with the "unloaded" pistol, as usual, did not fail to get in his fatal work, and in the course of a few days the effects of the toy pistol will probably be noticed.

The Parker men are keeping up a bold front, whether their claims are well-founded or not. The other fellows are also claiming the earth, but they are not attracting as much attention, because Parker seems to have nearly all the Democratic newspapers
going his way.

The attendance at the world's fair
is increasing and nearly four million have paid to go in since it was opened. It is a big show and the people of this great nation should all see it.

Judging from late reports, the rainy season in Manchuria has not yet stopped the Japanese successes. They are probably web-footed, and paddle around like ducks.

Paducah's Fourth of July celebration was one of the quietest in the city's history.

KILLED HERSELF
FOR HER BABIESSuicide of Mrs. Mollie Coates
This Morning.

Left a Note Saying She Was Not Crazy
and Jumped Into River at Foot of Ohio Street.

SHE CAME FROM ANNA, ILL.

The suicide early this morning of Mrs. Mollie Coates, of 711 Jones street, and the pathetic note she left her husband and children, reveal a case
of unusual desolation and sadness.
She claims that she was an obstacle in the way of her children, and had been unhappy ever since her mother died nearly a year ago at Anna, Ill. She took her life by jumping from some barges into the river at the foot of Ohio street about 5 o'clock this morning.

Tom Reed, the furniture factory
watchman, and the watchmen of several boats in the vicinity of the N.
C. & St. L. wharf at the foot of Ohio street, were startled early this morning by seeing a woman jump off several barges into the river.

An effort was made by them to rescue her, but she came to the surface only twice and then sank to rise no more. The water was not very deep, and within twenty minutes after her head sunk from view the body was recovered by Fred Johnson, river
watchman for the Paducah Furniture Company.

The woman proved to be wife of J.
R. Coates, 29 years old, and the mother of three small children. Life was extinct and her family was at once notified. It was then probably not 5 o'clock, and the body remained near where it was taken ashore until Coroner Peal arrived.

The woman after leaving home near Seventh and Jones street, first walked down the N. C. & St. L. track, through the iron furnace yard, and then crossed towards the right to some barges moored against the bank. She stopped on the barges and began to scrape the mud from her shoes, and then, apparently having done this to her satisfaction, she walked to the edge of the barges and deliberately jumped overboard. Those who chanced to see her had no idea of her intention until they saw her calmly throw herself into the water.

The following note was found
where she evidently had just finished writing it before leaving home for the river:

Paducah, Ky., July 5. 4 o'clock in the morning.

I, Mollie Coates, write this so there will be no dispute of my death. It will be my own self that does this—takes my life. I am very unhappy and have been since the 13th of last July, 1903, my mother died in the town of Anna very suddenly. I was left all alone and finding I could not feed and clothe my three little babies, Francis, Blossom and Helen, by myself, brought them and came to their father for help, but as he is unable to support them and my constitution is worn out, I can't do no more, and I now make my last request. Give them to the good sisters. Don't never part the three if it is in God's power to keep them together. I am not insane. Please don't say I was.
Only I am an obstacle in my children's way. They will be better off with the sisters than with me. If anyone doubts this being my handwriting show it to Mr. Cryus Harrell and wife, of Paducah. And there are others that will testify to it. My home and birthplace is Anna, Ill., my age 29, and birthday the 3rd of February. I am a widow divorced, but my husband, J. R. Coates, is the father of my children. Frances was 9 the 13th of June, Blossom was 7 the 28th of November and Helen was 5 the 24th of January. I bid my friends and babies adieu.

MOLLIE COATES.

The writing is quite legible, but the punctuation, spelling and grammar are bad.

Her husband did not know that she had left the house until notified of her death. She seems to have arisen

PADUCAH'S FAIR IS NOW A SURE GOJudge Given Writes That He
Has Arranged for it.

Will Begin at the Fair Grounds
August 15th and Will Last
One Week.

RACES IN THE AFTERNOON

All doubt as to whether or not Paducah will have a fair this fall is dispelled by Judge C. C. Given, of Madisonville, one of the promoters recently here, who writes as follows:

Madisonville, Ky., July 2, 1904.

Evening Sun, Paducah, Kentucky.
Gentlemen:—Please announce definitely on behalf of the management,
that the Paducah Races and Carnival,
will be held at West End Fair Grounds week beginning August 15, races in afternoon intermingled with great array of specialties, and grounds
lighted at night, and a fine entertainment given. The night show will not be strictly speaking, a carnival, but instead of walking around and being worn out, the people can sit comfortably in the grand stand and see the performance in the track and from platform.

You can assure the people of Paducah, that a "swell" exhibition will be given in all departments. Yours truly,

(Signed.) C. C. GIVEN.

One of the principal attractions
will be Kemp's Wild West Show.

TWO NEGROES

FOUND HANGING IN THE NORTH-ERN PART OF MARSHALL
COUNTY.

Nashville, Tenn., July 5.—The bodies of two negroes named Aldridge and Johnson were found hanging in the woods in the northern section of Marshall county. They are supposed to have been hanged by Whitecaps
Saturday night.

Miss Ada Cud of Paducah, has returned from Adrian, Ky., where she is spending the 4th.

about 4 o'clock, quietly written her last message, and slipped out of the house to the river, a distance of six or seven blocks.

Her husband states that the deceased came to Paducah from Anna, Ill., several months ago, and had been acting strangely ever since. She was employed in a lunatic asylum until about a year ago, when her mother died and she quit. She had never seemed to be the same since, according to her husband. He thinks her mind was affected by being in the asylum. She frequently said she would kill herself if it were not for her children, but he had no idea she would.

Her husband works for the Paducah Furniture Company, and it said to be a hard working man. He thinks his wife was temporarily insane.

Coroner Peal had the body removed home and will hold an inquest this afternoon. The scene was most pathetic when the body of the dead
mother was taken home to the children.

The verdict of the coroner's jury was of suicide by drowning. The body of the woman will probably be taken to Anna for burial.

RIGHT FOOD MAKES YOUNG OF THE AGED.

When one is lively and a hard worker at this age there is something interesting to tell and the Princeton lady who has passed this mark explains how her wonderful health is due to the food she eats.

"I am past seventy years of age and up to five years ago suffered terribly with chronic stomach trouble, heart disease, and was generally as weak as you will find sick old women of 56. At that time I began to use Grape-Nuts food and from the very first it began to build me up. Soon I came to a condition of perfect health because I can digest this food and it is full of nourishment. All my heart and stomach troubles are gone. I soon gained between 15 and 20 pounds and have never lost it. I can now do a hard day's work.

"Certainly this is the greatest food I ever struck. It gave me strength and ambition and courage and I try to do all the good I can telling people what it has done for me. Many of my neighbors use it and are doing fine.

"I had the grip the latter part of the winter and for four weeks ate absolutely nothing but Grape-Nuts and came out of the sickness nicely. That will show you how strong and sturdy I am. Truly it is wonderful food to do such things for one of my age."

Judge Hoke's Court

Justice at Sandy Bend Doesn't Always Go, as Was Proved In Two Cases.

WHEN this yere court was lected as justice of the peace in and for the county of Sandy Bend," began Judge Hoke as he rapped for order. "It was understood that what he said had to go. This court took off its coat and began bizness. It ladled out justice to white men, Injuns and Chingymen alike, and without stint. It enforced the law and compelled respect, and it patted good men on the back and made bad men git up'n hump.

"On several different occasions sartin shyster lawyers have had the gall to inform this court that she wasn't the biggest thing in Wyoming and that she would receive a check in her mind career. The court was not skeered. She went right ahead ladle-in' out justice and makin' decisions,

ALONG COMES JIM.

and she had come to believe that she was all the law fur 500 miles in every direction when she got a throwdown.

"Feller critters, I have been heard to observe in this courtroom that sooner than crawfish on any of my legal decisions I would resign my office and take to the hills, but the time has come when I've got to take a bluff—two of 'em. Two of my cases have bin reversed on me, and the supreme court has satisfied me that I was wrong. I've got to crawfish, and I'm goin' to do it gracefully. While it pains me to disavow that I'm not the biggest thing in Wyoming, I'm consoled by the thought that justice recognizes Sandy Bend as her headquarters and stops yere most of the time.

"The first case to which I refer is three of Joe Toole agin Jim Harper. Joe has a claim and a camp on Turkey hill. One day, when he is out, along comes Jim and cleans out the outfit, even down to the skillet. Joe comes home and finds Jim's trail. He is armed, but does head-roller that trail and bring him to airth and then plant him in a decent manner? Not any! He sits down and weeps and laments. Instead, and he appears at the Red Dog saloon and calls me out of a poker game to whine fur justice. That is Jim Harper camped down north three miles away, rolled up in Joe's blankets and sleepin' like a log, and yere is Joe Toole beggin' of me to let loose the dogs of justice because he ain't man 'nuff to git his own back. Was it any wonder that I turned to the bar and took a drink of water by mistake? Was it any wonder that I went out of that poker game with an ace full in my hand?

"But I let loose the dogs. Jim Harper was arrested and put on trial. He denied nuthin'. All he said was that Joe Toole was no man. Of course he wasn't. The court said so, and you all said so, and the court got so worked up over it that he let Jim go and sentenced Joe to seven years in state prison. Mebbe it was stretchin' the law a leetle. Mebbe it wasn't accordin' to the statoots. My decision has been upset by the higher court, and I've got to tell Joe Toole that he is a free mgn. I do tell him so, and I add that if he is hangin' around Sandy Bend an hour hence this court will give him a leekin' to be remembered all the rest of his days. If Jim Harper was yere I'd fine him enough to pay for the drinks all around, but as he is holdin' up stages over in Arizona at the present time, and is thus beyond my jurisdiction, all I kin do is to wish him well.

"The second case is that of Tom Reynolds agin Scott White. We all know 'em, and we know that neither are wuth the powder to blow 'em up. Tom Reynolds is drunk five days in the week, and works at his claim on Wolf mountain the other two. Scott White would be drunk all the time if there was whisky 'nuff in Sandy Bend, and he had money 'nuff to buy it. It's a toss up between the two, and no call for sympathy.

"Three months ago Tom Reynolds breaks into a Chinese laundry and steals eighteen shirts. It may be mentioned at this juncture that the best shirt in the lot belonged to this court, and that when he finally got it back one of the tails and all the buttons was gone. Tom is carryin' off his plunder, and has got as fur as Squaw creek, when Scott White steps out and points a stick at him and holds him up and takes the shirts. Tom has two guns on him, and don't snap a cartridge in defense. He stands thar and shakes and shivers fur a spell, and then he comes to rout me out and holier fur justice.

"Is this whar they gits justice? ne says as he rushes into the Red Dog.

"She be," says I, "and how do you want it?"

"By the bar!"

His Means of Travel Somewhat of a Puzzle

THE late General William H. Payne, who died in Washington some time ago, saw four years' brilliant service in the Confederate army and then returned to his home in Warrenton, Va., at the close of the civil war to take up the practice of law," said Senator Daniel, who was an intimate friend of General Payne.

"General Payne made quite a name for himself as a skillful handler of these touchy brethren—Virginia mountaineers—and was quite famous for his easy method of gentling them along and getting what he wanted out of them. On one occasion, however, he struck a tartar in the shape of an old mountaineer, and the result of the tilt between them maddened General Payne to the point of explosion and upset the rest of the courtroom so that it was half an hour before the judge could restore order.

"At that time General Payne was prosecuting attorney and was trying a murder case. The mountaineer in question came down to testify, he having been a witness to the shooting, which occurred near his home, about fifteen miles from Warrenton.

"You say you came down from your home this morning?" suggested General Payne when the witness took the stand.

"Yes, sir." "You rode down on horseback, I suppose?" "No, sir." "You drove down?" "No, sir." "You walked down, then?" "No, sir." "Then you came down on the train?" suggested General Payne, who was growing irritated at the titter that had followed each laconic negative from the mountaineer.

"No, sir; I didn't come on no kyars." "Well, then, sir," exclaimed the frate lawyer, "if you neither rode horseback nor drove nor walked nor came on the cars, would you kindly tell the judge and jury how you did come?" "I rid one of Bill Farns' old mules," was the solemn reply, which was drowned by the shouts of laughter from all present but General Payne and the witness." —Washington Times.

Use Shoffner's Sure Cure

The Great Tonic and Blood Purifier—Cures Indigestion, Dyspepsia and Catarrh.

It is a trite and true saying that the "blood is the life." Now where does the blood come from? Everybody knows, or should know, that it comes from the nutritive elements extracted by the stomach from the food we eat. If the digestive organs do not perform their functions by reason of disease germs, there is no nutrition extracted, and the food might better be thrown in the dump to decay and breed germs in the open air than to remain in the stomach and become a rotten, putrid mass, as it naturally does if there is no digestion. No disease germ can live and find lodgment in a human body that uses the Shoffner's Sure Cure. Price $1.00.

What People Say of the Shoffner's Sure Cure.

PADUCAH, Ky., March 5, 1903. To Whom It May Concern:

This is to certify that I was a sufferer with indigestion for five years and could get no relief until I bought one bottle of Shoffner's Sure Cure, and it helped me so much that I took six bottles, and it has cured me sound and well, thanks to the Shoffner's Sure Cure.

Mrs. JOHN SMEDLEY, 806 S. Third St.

This is to certify that I believe the Shoffner's Sure Cure saved my life. I was not able to sit up in bed when I began taking the remedy. I had such a severe cough I thought I had consumption. Physicians had given me up to die. After taking one bottle I was able to sit up some. After using five bottles I was fully restored to health. I cannot say enough in favor of this wonderful remedy for indigestion.

Mrs. SUE GRAHAM, Moscow, Ky.

If after using one bottle according to directions you are not benefited, your money will be refunded.

The Blazed Trail

By STEWART EDWARD WHITE

Copyright, 1902, by Stewart Edward White

"Hold on," he interrupted. "I claim precedence. You can give no receipt for any land in these townships until after my business is transacted. I have reason to believe that this gentleman and myself are both after the same descriptions."

"What?" shouted Morrison, assuming surprise.

"You will have to wait your turn, Mr. Morrison," said the clerk, virtuously before so many witnesses.

The business man was in a white rage of excitement.

"I insist on my application being filed at once!" he cried, waving his check. "I have the money right here to pay for every acre of it, and if I know the law the first man to pay takes the land."

He slapped the check down on the rail and hit it a number of times with the flat of his hand. Thorpe turned and faced him with a steady look in his level eyes.

"Mr. Morrison," he said, "you are quite right. The first man who pays gets the land, but I have won the first chance to pay. You will kindly step one side until I finish my business with Mr. Smithers here."

"I suppose you have the amount actually with you," said the clerk quite respectfully, "because if you have not Mr. Morrison's claim will take precedence."

"I would hardly have any business in a land office if I did not know that," replied Thorpe, and began his dictation of the description as calmly as though his inside pocket contained the required amount in bank bills.

Thorpe's hopes had sunk to zero. After all, looking at the matter dispassionately, why should he expect Carpenter to trust him, a stranger, with so large a sum? It had been madness. Only the blind confidence of the fighting man led him farther into the struggle.

Thorpe's descriptions were contained in the battered little notebook he had carried with him in the woods. For each piece of land first there came the township described by latitude and east and west range. After this general description followed another figure representing the section of that particular district. So 40-17 W-8 meant section 8 of the township on range 40 north, 17 west. If Thorpe wished to purchase the whole section that description would suffice. On the other hand, if he wished to buy only one forty he described its position in the quarter section. Thus SW-NW 40-17-8 meant the southwest forty of the northwest quarter of section 8 in the township already described.

The clerk marked across each square of his map as Thorpe read them the date and the purchaser's name.

In his notebook Thorpe had of course entered the briefest description possible. Now, indicating to the clerk, he conceived the idea of specifying each subdivision. This gained some time. Instead of saying simple, "Northwest corner of section 8," he made of it four separate descriptions, as follows: Northwest quarter of northwest quarter; northeast of northwest quarter; southwest of northwest quarter, and southeast of northwest quarter.

He was not so foolish as to read the descriptions in succession, but so scattered them that the clerk, putting down the figures mechanically, had no idea of the amount of unnecessary work he was doing. The minute hands of the clock dragged around. Thorpe droned down the long column. The clerk scratched industriously, repeating in a half voice each description as it was transcribed.

At length the task was finished. It became necessary to type duplicate lists of the descriptions. While the somnolent youth finished his task Thorpe listened for the messenger boy on the stairs.

A faint slam was heard outside the rickety old building. Hasty steps sounded along the corridor. The land locker merely stopped the drumming of his fingers on the broad arm of the chair. The door flew open, and Wallace Carpenter walked quickly to him.

Thorpe's face lighted up as he rose to greet his partner. The boy had not forgotten their compact after all.

"Then it's all right?" queried the latter breathlessly.

"Sure," answered Thorpe heartily. "Got 'em in good shape."

At the same time he was drawing the youth beyond the vigilant watchfulness of Mr. Morrison.

"You're just in time," he said in an undertone. "Never had so close a squeak. I suppose you have cash or a certified check. That's all they'll take here."

"What do you mean?" asked Carpenter blankly.

"Haven't you that money?" returned Thorpe quick as a hawk.

"For heaven's sake, isn't it here?" cried Wallace in consternation. "I wired Dunham, my banker, here last night and received a reply from him. He answered that he'd see to it. Haven't you seen him?"

"No," repeated Thorpe in his turn. "What can we do?"

"Can you get your check certified here near at hand?"

"Yes."

"Well, go do it. And get a move on

you. You have precisely until that boy there finishes ticking that machine—not a second longer."

"Can't you get them to wait a few minutes?"

"Wallace," said Thorpe, "do you see that white whiskered old lynx in the corner? That's Morrison, the man who wants to get our land. If I fail to plank down the cash the very instant it is demanded he gets his chance. And he'll take it. Now go. Don't hurry until you get beyond the door, then fly."

"You're just in time."

Thorpe sat down again in his broad arm chair and resumed his drumming. The nearest bank was six blocks away. He counted over in his mind the steps of Carpenter's progress—now to the door, now in the next block, now so far beyond. He had just escorted him to the door of the bank when the clerk's voice broke in on him.

"Now," Smithers was saying, "I'll give you a receipt for the amount and later will send to your address the title deeds of the descriptions."

Carpenter had yet to find the proper official to identify himself, to certify the check and return. It was hopeless. Thorpe dropped his hands in surrender. Then he saw the boy lay the two typed lists before his principal, and dimly he perceived that the youth, shamefacedly, was holding something bulky toward himself.

"What is it?" he stammered, drawing his hand back as though from red-hot iron.

"You asked me for a telegram," said the boy stubbornly, as though trying to excuse himself, "and I didn't just catch the name anyway. When I saw it on those lists I had to copy I thought of this here."

"Where did you get it?" asked Thorpe breathlessly.

"A fellow came here early and left it for you while I was sweeping out," explained the boy. "Said he had to catch a train. It's yours, all right, ain't it?"

"Oh, yes," replied Thorpe.

He took the envelope and walked uncertainly to the tall window. He looked out at the chimneys. After a moment he tore open the envelope.

"I hope there's no bad news, sir?" said the clerk, startled at the paleness of the face Thorpe turned to the desk.

"No," replied the land locker. "Give me a receipt. There's a certified check for your money."

CHAPTER XIV.

NEXT day the articles of partnership were drawn, and Carpenter gave his note for the necessary expenses. Then, in answer to a penciled card which Mr. Morrison had evidently left at Thorpe's hotel in person, both young men called at the lumberman's place of business. They were ushered immediately into the private office.

Mr. Morrison was a smart little man, with an ingratiating manner and a fishy eye. He greeted Thorpe with marked geniality.

"My opponent of yesterday," he cried jocularly. "Sit down, Mr. Thorpe. Although you did me out of some land I had made every preparation to purchase, I can't but admire your grit and resourcefulness. How did you get here ahead of us?"

"I walked across the upper peninsula and caught a boat," replied Thorpe briefly.

"Indeed, indeed?" replied Mr. Morrison, placing the tips of his fingers together. "Extraordinary! Well, Mr. Thorpe, you overreached us nicely, and I suppose we must pay for our carelessness. We must have that pine even though we pay stumpage on it. Now, what would you consider a fair price for it?"

NAPOLEON, As Seen by His Associates

ODD STORIES OF NAPOLEON

(Copyright, 1904, by G. L. Kilmer.)

XXI.

THE Duchesse d'Abrantes relates the following anecdote of Napoleon's debut in uniform at the age of sixteen:

"Previously to his departure he came to pass some time at our house. My sister was then at her convent, but she frequently came home while Napoleon was with us. I well recollect that on the day when he first put on his uniform he was as vain as young men usually are on such an occasion. There was one part of his dress which had a very odd appearance—that was his boots. They were so high and wide that his little thin legs seemed buried in their amplitude. Young people are always ready to observe anything ridiculous, and as soon as my sister and I saw Napoleon enter the drawing room we burst into a loud fit of laughter. At that early age, as well as in after life, Bonaparte could not resist a joke, and when he found himself the object of merriment he grew angry. My sister, who was some years older than I, told him that since he wore a sword he ought to be gallant to ladies and instead of being angry should be happy that they joked with him. 'You are nothing but a child—a little pensionnaire,' said Napoleon in a tone of contempt. 'Cecile, who was twelve or thirteen years of age, was highly indignant at being called a child, and she hastily resented the affront by replying to Bonaparte, 'And you are nothing but a puss in boots.' This excited a general laugh among all present except Napoleon, whose rage I will not attempt to describe."

Napoleon's last appearance on the firing line was described by his aide-de-camp, General Gourgaud, to Dr. O'Meara at St. Helena.

"General Gourgaud informed me that at the close of the battle of Waterloo," says Dr. O'Meara, "when the charge made by the French had failed and the English charged in their turn, a part of the cavalry of the latter, with some tirailleurs intermingled with them, approached to within a hundred or a hundred and fifty toises of the spot where the emperor was standing with only Soult, Drouot, Bertrand and himself. Close to them was a small French battalion drawn up in a square. Napoleon ordered Gourgaud to fire some shots from two or three fieldpieces which belonged to the battalion to drive away the cavalry, which were approaching nearer. This was put into execution, and one of those shots carried away the Marquis of Anglessea's leg. Napoleon then placed himself with the column and wanted to charge, exclaiming, 'Il faut mourir ici, il faut mourir sur le champ de bataille' ('I must die here; I must die on the field of battle'). At this time the English tirailleurs were firing at them, and they expected every moment to be charged. Labeledoyere was galloping about like a madman, with his arms extended before him, seeking to be killed. Napoleon was prevented from throwing himself among the enemy by Soult, who laid hold of the bridle, exclaiming that he would not be killed, but taken prisoner, and, with the aid of the others, finally succeeded in compelling him to leave the field."

Constant, Napoleon's valet, recalls this amusing scene at the court of the "parvenu emperor."

"On May 18, 1804, the empire was proclaimed, and the First Consul received, at St. Cloud, the senate, led by Consul Cambaceres, who became a few hours later arch chancellor of the empire, and it was by him that the emperor heard himself for the first time saluted with the title of Sire. Nothing could be more amusing than the embarrassment of the whole service when it was necessary to reply to his majesty's questions. They would begin with a mistake, then would try again and do worse, saying ten times in the same minute, 'Sire, general, your majesty, citizen, First Consul.'"

One of the first to seek the presence of the new emperor was an obsequious messenger, who had been a page under the deposed king, bearing a paper from one of the government departments. Approaching Napoleon reverently, he dropped on one knee, bowing very low, and held out the document, which the emperor received, smiling.

"Where did you learn your obsequiousness?" said he.

"At the court of Louis XVI, Sire."

"Well, I like that!" exclaimed the excited Consul, with unmistakable pleasure.

Says Constant:

"The emperor took a fancy on one occasion, but only one, to try a pipe. The Persian ambassador had made his majesty a present of a very handsome pipe such as is used by the orientals. One day he was seized with a desire to try it and had everything necessary for this purpose prepared. The fire having been applied to the bowl, the only question now was to light the tobacco, but from the manner in which his majesty attempted this it was impossible for him to succeed, as he alternately opened and closed his lips repeatedly without drawing in his breath at all. 'Why, what is the matter?' cried he. 'It does not work at all.' I called his attention to the fact that he was not inhaling properly and showed him how it ought to be done, but the emperor still continued his performances, which were like some peculiar kind of yawning. Tired out by his fruitless efforts at last, he told me to light it for him, which I did and instantly handed it back to him. But he had hardly taken a whiff when the smoke, which he did not know how to breathe out again, filled his throat, got into his windpipe and came out through his nose and eyes in great puffs. As soon as he could get his breath he panted forth: 'Take it away! What a pest! Oh, the wretches! It has made me sick.' In fact, he felt ill for at least an hour after, and renounced forever the 'pleasure of a habit which,' said he, 'is only good to enable do nothing to kill time.'"

Among the anecdotes of Napoleon's snuff habit, which he is said to have indulged freely, the following is preserved in the collection edited by the Abbe Audierne:

"Belime was private secretary to Clarke, minister for war, who sent him to the Tuilleries for the emperor's orders. The latter was dictating, with his snuffbox in front of him. Napoleon having turned his back, Belime took a pinch. The emperor saw him in a looking glass, turned round sharply and, taking up the snuffbox, presented it to the dumfounded and trembling secretary, with these words: 'Keep it; it is too small for us both,' and he continued his dictation."

Bourrienne says that Napoleon was himself an inveterate talebearer and often caused trouble between friends in this manner. Says Mme. de Remusat, "Any one who chose to speak evil of others to Bonaparte was pretty sure of gaining his ear, for he was always credulous of evil."

At masked balls given by the court Napoleon displayed the worst traits in his character.

"He was closely masked, but yet easy to recognize by that peculiar air and gait which he could not disguise. He accosted the ladies freely," says Mme. de Remusat, "and was often very unscrupulous in his remarks to them, and if he was answered and unable at once to recognize who it was that spoke he would pull off the speaker's mask, revealing himself by that rude act of power. He also took great pleasure, under the cover of his disguise, in seeking out certain husbands and tormenting them with anecdotes, true or false, about their wives. If he learned afterward that these revelations had been followed by unpleasant consequences he became very angry, for he would not permit the displeasure which he had excited to be independent of him. It must be said that there is in

NAPOLEON IN 1806. (After a painting by Lefevre.)

Bonaparte a badness which makes him like to do evil in small as well as in great things."

Once he was publicly rebuked by a court beauty noted for her lightness of character. "I hear you are fond of the gentlemen," said he. "Yes, Sire, when they are polite."

Constant tells this anecdote of his master's taste in the matter of wine: "The emperor drank only Chamberlain wine and rarely without water, for he had no fondness for wine and was a poor judge of it. This recalls that one day at the camp of Boulogne, having invited several officers to his table, his majesty had wine poured for Marshal Augereau and asked him with an air of satisfaction how he liked it. The marshal tasted it, sipped it critically and finally replied, 'There is better,' in a tone which was unmistakable. The emperor, who had expected a different reply, smiled at the marshal's candor."

On his secret journey through France after the escape from Elba, Napoleon was confronted by his old soldiers, now in the service of the restored Bourbon king. Advancing alone, his chest exposed toward the guns pointed at him, he exclaimed: 'Here is your emperor! Kill your old general!' Instantly every weapon dropped, and the soldiers sent to kill him swelled the escort which followed on to Paris.

GOOD INCREASE

Shown for First Half of the Year 1904.

Postoffice Receipts For Last Quarter Some Below Last Year.

The receipts of the local postoffice for the quarter ending June 30 were: $10,820.81. For the same period in 1903 they were: $10,840.49. The receipts for the first six months of this year were: $23,246.66. For the first six months of 1903 they were: $21,855.12.

Thus it will be seen that while there was a slight falling off in the last quarter over last year, the average for the six months of this year is much in advance of last year, showing a general increase in business at the post-office.

There is ample justification for the claim made by The Chicago Record Herald that its readers enjoy every day in the week, Sundays included, a news service that is without parallel in range and completeness. In addition to the independent news facilities of The Record-Herald, that paper receives the complete news service of the New York Herald, the New York World and the Associated Press, and when it is considered that its news columns are supplemented by all the special features so popular with its thousands of readers, it will be seen that The Record-Herald holds a unique place among the great newspapers of the United States.

BY BOLD HOLD UP MEN IN CHICAGO.

Chicago, Ill., July 5.—One man was killed and another probably fatally wounded by two hold-up men, who invaded a saloon in North Kedzie avenue. John Lane, a stage carpenter, was shot through the head and fell dead just outside the door. The proprietor of the saloon, August Ragal, was wounded in the right breast.

Lane had stopped at the saloon for a drink. Ragal served him and the two were talking when two young men entered and called for drinks. As the glasses were set before them they drew revolvers and ordered the liquor dealer and his patron to hold up their hands.

Reaching quickly under the bar Ragal seized a plate and hurled it at the nearest robber. Instantly the shooting began. Lane was struck by one of the first bullets and reeled to the door. Ragal fell behind the bar with a wound in his breast. The robbers fled.
